Steiner was a fascinating man with theosophical understanding. While I do not agree with many of his positions, I find it quite stimulating to read and challenge myself. I do not limit my reading to those with whom I agree, for that limits my growth. He has some points that are definitely worth considering.

Rudolf Steiner captures the essence of Christianity, then added his exposure to Indian Hindi with karma to describe a process to drive moral behavior, instead of blind reliance on religion. His most important contribution is to focus on the framework of religion in the context of living a moral life, recognizing specific instances of contributions to improve (as illustrated with his example of Augustine's focus on the original sin to help spread Christianity) and the spiritual realm that includes karma (or reincarnation from his exposure to eastern religions). In the last 100 years, religions like Christianity has taken off in a wrong dimension of infallibility, including both the Catholic doctrine of papal infallibility objected by theologians like Hans Kung, and Protestants have started to preach the perfect Bible which breed extremism. We just need to look at Pakistan and Islam to see how quickly extremism can develop if we fail to focus on the moral framework behind our religions or spiritual beliefs.

Great book at a great price with fast ship.
